

CLIPPING VIRAL CONTENT

GOH CONSULTING

Goal with Clipping

Ensure every short-form clip is intentional, high-value, on-brand, and sent to the right channel. We don't clip randomly, we don't post filler, and every clip passes the filter before it's posted.

Who You're Clipping For

Our ICP is coaches, consultants, and founders with a personal brand doing 50k+/month who want to scale seriously. Every clip either speaks directly to them, or is intentional top-of-funnel likeability content that widens reach.

Be clear on your ICP and ensure every clip speaks to them.

Step 1 - Identify Key Moments

When reviewing long-form content (YouTube, calls, vlogs, interviews), mark 5 to 10 timestamps where a moment has:

- A strong opinion, an emotional reaction, or clear tension or conflict.
- A clear lesson, an authority statement, or a unique mechanism or framework.

A moment is clip-worthy when the sentence is quotable, it challenges a belief, it implies money, scale, risk, or growth, or it feels like a turning point. If you can turn it into a headline in under 5 seconds, it's strong.

Step 2 - Classify the channel

Every clip is either Main channel or Second channel. Decide this before anything else, because the standard is different.

- Main channel: highly selective. Broad hook, one clear message, high value, and packaging that can carry it. This is our best work only.
- Second channel: niche is fine, and the bar is lower, but it still has to be intentional and still needs a hook (a niche hook is fine).
- The rule: if you're uncertain whether it's main-worthy, it's a Second channel clip. Never send a borderline clip up for main review.
- If a long-form video has no main channel worthy clips, say so explicitly. Never clip for the sake of posting.

Step 3 - Choosing the Hook

The hook starts broad to stop the maximum number of people, while still appealing to the ICP. The video starts broad, hooks a wide audience, then narrows to the specific ICP as it progresses.

- Broad opening: as broad as possible without being irrelevant. Address a pain or experience the ICP feels that a much wider audience also relates to.
- Creates immediate curiosity: opens a loop, withholds key information, and forces the viewer to need context.
- Points of interest to look for: recency (a recent or ongoing event), relevancy (fear, desire, challenge, or a personal story that carries a feeling), associations (celebrity jacking), conflict (controversial), and unusual (just weird).
- Does a new hook need to be recorded? For main-channel clips, if the spoken opener isn't strong enough to stop the scroll, flag it so SooWei can record a fresh hook. Don't submit a clip without a strong hook.

Step 4 - 4 Point Check

For every clip, answer these four questions.

1. Is it entertaining?

- Does it hold attention in the first 1 to 2 seconds?
- Is there tension, confidence, directness, or a pattern interrupt?

- Would you personally stop scrolling for this?

2. Does it spark emotion?

- Curiosity, urgency, ego check, confidence, stress, relief, inspiration, or validation. If it doesn't make someone feel something, it won't perform.

3. Would you pay $5 for this insight?

- Is the takeaway genuinely valuable? Would a 50k+/month business owner get something actionable, more than surface-level motivation?

4. Is it one clear message?

- One core takeaway, one clear lesson, one clear emotional thread. If there are three ideas in 45 seconds, it's messy.
- If removing a sentence doesn't weaken the message, remove it.

Important distinction: checks 1 to 3 judge the moment's raw potential, you can't fix those, the moment either has it or it doesn't. Check 4 judges' execution, and it's almost always fixable in the edit. So a clip that fails only on a message isn't bad, it must be re-clipped. A clip that fails any of checks 1 to 3, discard the clip.

Step 5 - Package it

A clip can pass all four checks and still die on weak packaging. Packaging is most of the game.

- First frame: the opening frame has to stop the scroll on its own. Never open on a random mid-sentence line.
- On-screen hook text: under 10 words, broad, curiosity-driven, and readable in the first second.
- Format choice: pick the format that fits the moment (see the Format Guide)
- Caption: written to the ICP, adds context, and carries a soft CTA where it fits.
- Feel different from the last few posts: vary the b-roll, text style, framing, and music. The page should never look like one clipping template on repeat.

Step 6 - Score the clip

Label each clip against the 4-Point Check:

- 4/4, ready to post.
- 3/4, needs work. If the only miss is message, reclip it. If the miss is entertaining, emotion, or value, it likely can't be saved.
- 2/4 or below, not good enough.

Only 4/4 clips get scheduled on the main channel

Format Guide

Match the moment to the format so the feed stays varied.

- Value or lesson: clipped value reel (our staple).
- Strong opinion or personal story: iPhone raw talk.
- Before-and-after or progress: transformation reel.
- Multi-point framework: carousel (personal or value).
- Aesthetic or lifestyle: b-roll montage.

Trial Reels & Reformatting

- Reformat our best-performing reels with minimal changes so the algorithm doesn't recognise them, then repost as trial reels.
- Post 3 to 4 trial reels a day to test reach.
- Judge trial reels on follow efficiency, not raw views.

Intentional Execution

Music

- Avoid generic, overused tracks. Music must match the tone and overall vibe.

Pacing

- Remove filler, repetition, and weak transitions. Tighten silence unless the silence is intentional tension.

B-roll

- Every shot must be intentional (emotion, context, transition, or proof). See the B-Roll SOP. Don't reuse the same b-roll across a batch, that's what makes the page feel stale.

The Metric That Matters

A strong clip drives follows and ICP leads, not just views. Judge performance on follow rate and lead quality, not vanity views. A low-view clip with a high follow rate beats a high-view clip that grows nothing.

Claude Clipping Prompt

You are a content strategist and clipping editor for a high-level business coaching brand targeting coaches, consultants, and founders with a personal brand doing 50k+/month. [insert your ICP here]

Below you will find two things: (1) the Clipping SOP, your complete criteria and rules; and (2) the transcript, the raw content to analyse. Read the SOP fully before reviewing the transcript. Apply every filter to each moment you identify. Do not clip anything that doesn't pass the full criteria.

For each clip you identify, return:

- Timestamp range
- Channel: Main or Second, with a one-line reason
- Suggested on-screen hook (the first line as it would appear on screen, under 10 words)
- New hook needed? Yes or no (for main-channel clips, whether a fresh hook should be recorded)
- Recommended format (value reel, raw talk, transformation, carousel, b-roll montage)
- Score: 4/4, 3/4, or fail
- Which checks it passed (entertaining, sparks emotion, worth $5, one clean message)
- One sentence on why it works or what needs to change

Only return clips that score 4/4 or 3/4. Do not list anything that fails. If the transcript yields zero main-channel clips, say so explicitly.
